

PRICE ONE CENT.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, MAY 29, 1902.

PRICE ONE CENT.

$5,000 PICTURE STOLEN FROM CASE

Painting by Felix Ziem, Owned by American Millionaire, Disappeared in Transit.

A painting by Felix Ziem, the famous French colorist, said to be worth $5,000, which was recently bought by a steel magnate of this city, was stolen from its case while in transit between Paris and New York on the steamship La Touraine, sailing from Havre on April 24. The picture was in the custody of the American Express Company, which concern has asked the police of every city in the United States to look for it.

The missing picture is a wooden panel, 16 1/2 by 10 1/2 inches. It was packed in Paris with great care in a specially constructed box, and was given to the American Express Company at its Paris office, No. 11 Rue de la Paix, on April 24. There is every reason to believe that the picture was in the box when it was put on board the steamship at Havre. When the box was opened at the Custom House in this city it was discovered that the panel had been extracted from the frame and that the thief had so cleverly repaired the box that the method used to enter it was not apparent.

Immediately the loss became known, the American Express Company put its own detectives on the case. They were unable to do anything and a circular was sent to the police all over the country reciting the circumstances of the theft and offering a liberal reward, either for the capture of the thieves or for the recovery of the picture.

Attached to the circular is a reproduction of the work of art, described as follows:

"A canal, water blue and tranquil between high houses, the facade of a church and other buildings.

"In the foreground a stone bridge, forming an arch, under which a gondola is passing. In the background beneath this arch is seen another bridge. In the water is reflected the white and rose colored walls of the buildings, brightly illuminated by the last rays of the setting sun. Signed by artist in left hand corner.

This description fits in a general way nearly all of Ziem's paintings. He makes a specialty of Venetian scenes, for which he finds a ready market in the United States. Art dealers of this city say that the painting which was stolen from La Touraine is not worth anything like $5,000—not one-fifth that sum, in fact. The identity of the millionaire to whom the painting was consigned has not been disclosed.

SIR THOMAS BUILDING ANOTHER CUP CHALLENGER.

Fife and Watson, England's Greatest Designers, Collaborate on the Third Boat.

LONDON, May 28.—William Fife and George L. Watson have as previously foretold in these despatches, collaborated on the plans for a new challenger for the America's Cup, which will be built by the Dennys, at Dumbarton, for Sir Thomas Lipton.

Captain Robert Wringe, who, with Captain Hogarth, was on board the Shamrock II in her series of races for the cup, will be in supreme command of the new yacht.

All plans are now completed and arrangements have been made for closing the building contract. The satisfaction of Mr. Fife expressed with the Shamrock II work on the Shamrock II, made that firm a strong competitor for the contract, but Mr. Watson's influence resulted in the selection of the Dennys.

The new yacht will be constructed under the shed beneath which the Shamrock II was built.

BOY MAY DIE FROM HOUND'S ATTACK.

Little Fellow Thrown Down and Badly Bitten by Big Dog That Had to Be Driven Off with Clubs.

NEWARK, N. J., May 29.—Suffering from injuries inflicted by a bloodhound, Frederick Kleichert, twelve years old, lies in a critical condition at his home, No. 84 Fairview avenue.

Young Kleichert was playing in a lot to-day with some companions when a huge bloodhound leaped over the fence and sprang upon him and knocked him down. Kleichert screamed in fear and the other boys armed themselves with sticks and stones and tried to drive the brute off, but he buried his fangs deep into Kleichert's face, arms and legs as the boy lay upon the ground, trying as best he could to protect himself.

Finally, a number of men who had been brought to the spot by the cries of Kleichert and the other lads beat the animal off. Kleichert's left leg was badly mangled, five inches of flesh being torn from the bone. His arms and face were lacerated in many places and he probably would have been killed by the brute had not help arrived. As it is he may not recover from his injuries.

MR. SELIGMAN ILL AT WIFE'S FUNERAL.

There Saw Her Features for the First Time Since They Were Both Stricken in Chicago.

In spite of the malady which has prostrated him for many weeks Alfred L. Seligman, of the well-known family of bankers, left his sick room this morning to attend the funeral of his wife, Mrs. Florence Arnold Seligman, from the home of her late grandfather, Simon Bernheimer, at No. 218 West Fourteenth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Seligman last April, well and happy, went to Chicago to accompany their friends in the Grau Opera Company on their spring tour. While at the Auditorium Hotel in that city Mr. Seligman was suddenly stricken ill. His condition was so serious that his wife was not allowed to see him. She then became ill and returned to the home of relatives in this city. Mr. Seligman followed, broken in health.

He did not see his wife again until he looked on her dead features to-day.

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Seligman improved after their return to this city, and last week Mrs. Seligman was sent to Miss Austin's private sanitarium at No. 26 West Sixty-first street. She was operated on there Monday by Drs. Arthur T. Hiss, Herbert Constable and Charles E. Burrows. Tuesday she died from hemorrhage and shock following the operation.

Mr. Seligman was ill at the home of relatives at No. 26 West Seventy-fifth street and his wife's body was taken in charge by her relatives. Mr. Seligman's physicians advised him against attending the funeral, but he insisted. He was supported during the services by Miss Bernheimer, an aunt of Mrs. Seligman. Unable to control his emotion, he preceded a tragic figure. Against the advice of friends and relatives he persisted in an attempt to ride to the burying ground.

Prof. Felix Adler was in charge of the funeral. The services were read by Rev. Dr. Gustave Gotthelf, of Temple Emanuel, assisted by Rabbi Joseph Silverman, El, assisted by the Seligman and Bernheimer families were present.

The interment took place in the Seligman vault, in Salem Field Cemetery, Cypress Hills, L. I.

BOSTONS BEAT GIANTS; BROOKLYNS PLAY QUAKERS.

Superbas Score Six Runs in Six Innings While Philadelphia Make Not a Single Hit.

The Batting Order.

Brooklyn.	Philadelphia.
Dolan, cf.	Thomas, cf.
Keeler, rf.	Brown, lf.
Spencer, 1b.	Douglass, 1b.
McGregory, 2b.	Barry, 2b.
Dahlen, ss.	Doolin, c.
Ahearn, c.	Hulsewitz, ss.
Flood, 2b.	Hollman, ss.
Irwin, 3b.	Childs, 3b.
Newton, 1b.	Felix, p.
Empire, C.	Empire, C.

(Special to The Evening World.)
WASHINGTON PARK, BROOKLYN, May 29.—After an absence of over three weeks Ned Hanlon and his collection of ball tossers from this borough appeared on their own diamond this afternoon and played the Quakers.

The day was an ideal one for baseball, the sun shining from a cloudless sky, which made things comfortable for the rooters. Neither team had had a chance to do any playing or practice work during the last three days on account of the disagreeable weather, and Manager Hanlon and Shetline had their players out on the field long before the time stated for the game to begin.

The poor showing made by the Brooklyn team on their Western trip, during which they only won six games out of sixteen, was responsible for a lecture from Hanlon previous to the game.

A small crowd was on hand when the game started, the fans evidently not being pleased with the poor showing made by Hanlon's men. They have decided to remain away until the team plays better ball.

Just before the game started Uncle Nick Young, secretary and treasurer of the National League, entered the grounds and watched the game from one of the boxes.

Lefty Newton, who is Hanlon's winning pitcher at present, was selected to do the twirling for the Trolley Dodgers, while Shetline depended on Rodiger.

NEW YORK LOSES.

NEW YORK ..... 0 0 0 1 1 0 2 0 0-4
JOSTON ..... 0 1 1 0 0 0 0 0 3-5

BROOKLYN-PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA ..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0-0
BROOKLYN ..... 2 0 0 1 3 0 2 8-8

AMERICAN LEAGUE GAMES.

At Boston—St. Louis, 2; Boston, 6.
At Philadelphia—End of sixth: Detroit, 4; Philadelphia, 5.
At Washington—End fourth: Cleveland, 2; Washington, 10.
At Baltimore—End of fifth: Chicago, 9; Baltimore, 6.

LATE RESULTS AT ST. LOUIS.

Fourth Race—Nickey D. 1. Crimean 2. Lakeview Belle 3.

AT HAWTHORNE.

Fourth Race—Vulcan 1. Flying Torpedo 2. Searcher 3.
Fifth Race—Miss Liza 1. Eva Rice 2. Merops 3.

NAME "PAT" HOGAN, THOUGH A NEGRO.

Patrick Hogan, a negro, was sent to North Brother Island, with small-pox, to-day. A doctor found him walking on Third avenue, between Ninety-eighth and Ninety-ninth streets.

EXPLOSION IN PAPER CAP WORKS.

An explosion occurred shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon in the factory of Conrad Pilgrim on Ninety-ninth street, Flat-bush. Arthur Watch, thirty-six years old, of No. 64 Morrell street, was severely injured. The damage to property was $2,000. Pilgrim manufactures torpedoes and paper caps. Several caps were exploded accidentally and ignited several pounds of fulminate of mercury stored nearby.

DENTIST ARRESTED ON LARCENY CHARGE.

Edward W. Ellison, a dentist, of No. 230 East Eighty-second street, was arrested this afternoon in the house of a friend in One Hundred and Twentieth street on a charge of grand larceny. He is charged with taking $80 worth of gold from Martin L. Collins, a fellow dentist.

HANNA AND MORGAN CONFER ON STRIKE?

CLEVELAND, May 29.—A report was circulated here to-day that a long conference was held during the morning between Senator Hanna, Chairman of the Civic Federation, and George W. Perkins, representing J. P. Morgan & Co., relative to a settlement of the anthracite coal strike.

Sensor Hanna refused either to deny or confirm the report.

"I have nothing to say," he exclaimed. "Too much has been said already."

Commissioner Lederer said late this afternoon that he received a tip that the coal strike would be ended in a few days.

CAUSE TO DROP FIRE CHIEF CROKER?

A Brooklyn newspaper says to-day that the full Board of Surgeons of the Fire Department has examined Chief Croker and found him suffering from defective eyesight. If this be true it means that he will be dropped, as Commissioner Sturgis wants to get him out of the Department. The Brooklyn report says that Mr. Croker will be succeeded by Deputy Chief Purroy.

SPOONER FEARS PHILIPPINE DOMINION.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Senator Spooner in advocating the passage of the Philippine Government Bill this afternoon said he was still opposed to permanent dominion of the Philippine Islands. He had, he said, voted against the admission of Hawaii. He did not want to take that first long step out into the Pacific.

PROMISE OF FINE DECORATION DAY.

Weather-Sharp Emery, of the local weather bureau, promises a fine day for Memorial Day, to-morrow, in the following prophecy:

"Present indications are for a fine day on the 30th of May. The skies will be clear, the temperature ranging between 56 and 74 degrees."

FIRE DESTROYS BUSINESS SECTION OF TOWN.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., May 29.—Word has just been received here that a big fire is raging at Jersey Shore, about ten miles west of this city. Twenty buildings in the business section have already been destroyed. This city has been asked for assistance.

SEVERE FIGHTING AT GEORGIA PRIMARIES.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 29.—The White County primaries here to-day for Representatives to the Legislature and county officers were attended by severe fighting between the opposing factions at the Court-House.

Beaneaters Start with Two Runs but New Yorkers Play a Steady, Up-Hill Game and Take Lead But Lose It

The Batting Order.

New York.	Boston.
Dave, 1b.	Lush, cf.
Clark, cf.	Tennet, 1b.
Smith, 2b.	De Mont, 2b.
Bowerman, c.	Cooley, 1b.
Laider, 3b.	Carrigan, 2b.
Bean, ss.	Greening, 3b.
Douth, 1b.	Long, ss.
Jackson, lf.	Wagon, c.
Sparks, p.	Maloney, p.
Empire, C.	Empire, C.

(Special to The Evening World.)

SOUTH END GROUNDS, BOSTON, May 29.—Just look at the Giants' batting order and see whether a nice piece of patchwork could be made up. It is truly a wonder and is all due to the awful streak of hard luck which has hit the New Yorkers. The boys in their dilapidated state have really worked wonders in the trip through the West, and should come in for a greater share of sympathy than censure.

The players have shown that they are of the right sort. Others under similar conditions would have lost heart long ago and been on a desert to the rear by this time. But that is not so with the Giants. Every game they go into they start with the purpose of winning and are never beaten until the last man is out.

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and not a club in the League will ever catch us. We will have the last word."

With that same resolve they began the last game of the series with the Bostonians this afternoon. They vowed to trounce the local fellows and gain that which they lost yesterday—third place. To go home no worse than third has been their expressed desire since the Western games began. They want to hear the yells of approval of the New York fans and know that they would if they jumped back into their position. It would sound like music to their ears, for nothing but cries of derision have met them on their tour.

"Let us get home in third place," was the demand of every member of the team, "and